The Imperial Prince visited the Vermeer Exhibition.

The Imperial Prince Naruhito, who is throne to the Emperor in May 2019, saw the Vermeer Exhibition.

At the night of January 18th, the imperial prince visited the Vermeer exhibition (Sponsored by Sankei Newspaper and etc.), which is now held at the Ueno Loyal Museum in Tokyo.

The imperial prince has visited the museums in the Netherlands and New York to see Vermeer works, as he has been interested in Vermeer for many years. He was amazed by the vivid blue color of lapis lazuli in Vermeer's representative work, The Milkmaid, and commented that "it is very bright and beautiful."
